law of the land. It knows no privileged class, and therefore we cherish the hope that we may be fully enfranchised, not only here in this District, but throughout the land. We respectfully submit that render-ing anything less than this would be rendering to us less than our just due; that granting anything less than our full rights will be a disregard of our just rights, of due respect for our feelings. If the powers that be do so it will be used as a license, as it were, or an apology for any community, or for individuals, thus disposed, to outrage our rights and feelings. It has been shown in the present war that the government may justly reach the strong arm into the States and demand from them, those who owe allegiance, their assistance and support.

May it not reach out a like arm to secure and protect its subject upon whom it has a claim?

Frederick Douglass advanced and addressed the President, saying: Mr. President-We are not here to enlighten you, sir, as to your duties as the Chief Magistrate of this republic, but to show our respect and to present in brief the claims of our race to your favorable consideration.— In the order of Divine Providence you are placed in a position where you have the power to save or destroy us—to bless or blast us—I mean our whole race. Your blast us—I mean our whole race. Your noble and humane predecessor placed in our hands the sword to assist in saving the nation, and we do hope that you, his able successor, will favorably regard the placing in our hands the ballot with which to save ourselves. We shall submit no argument structive than they were a few years ago. But the ation, to volunteer in the service of the birds will eat fruit as well as insects, and now the country, subject to being drafted, subject cultivator is in a dilemma to decide whether it is to hear the burdens of the State, makes it best to let the insects feast on the foliage of his not improper that we should ask to share vines and trees, and thus destroy his crop of fruit, in the privileges of the condition. I have or to allow the birds to check insedt depredations no speech to make on this occasion. I sin-ply submit these observations as a limited expression of the views and feelings of the delegation with which I have come.

The President then spoke as follows: In reply to some of your inquiries, not to make a speech about this matter-for it is has never seen it. In some places it is impossible to get a bunch of ripe grapes of any of the nicer kinds, for birds are excellent judges of quality in fruit. We are glad to see that the subject is attracting the attention of Horticultural Societies; course, that I am a friend of humanity, and at a recent meeting of the Alton, III., Society, a to that portion of it which constitutes the colored population, I can give no evidence hereafter. Everything that I have had, both as regards life and property, has been perilled in this cause, and I feel and think that I understand—not to be egotistical—what should be the true direction of this question, and what course of policy would result in the amelioration and ultimate elevation, not only of the colored, but of the

I might say, however, vine, but it is not as good as that taken in autumn. that practically, so far as my connection with slaves has gone, I have been their slave instead of their being mine. Some have even followed me here, while others are occupying and enjoying my property with my consent. For the colored race, my means, my time, my all have been perilled and at this late day, after giving evidence that is tangible, that is practical, I am free to say to you that I do not like to be arraigned by some who can get up handsome-ly rounded periods and deal in rhetoric talk about abstract ideas of liberty, who

The President shook hands with each member of the delegation, Fred. Douglass blood. I think I know what I say. I feel that if member of the delegation, Fred. Douglass first advancing for that purpose.

George T. Downing then addressed the President as follows:—We present ourselves to your Excellency to make known with pleasure the respect which we cherish for you—a respect which is due you as a Chief Magistrate. It is our desire for you to know that we come feeling that we are friends meeting a friend. We should, however, have manifested our friendship by not com-

We talk about justice; we talk about

The President-I am not quite through yet. Slavery has been abelished. A great yet, cavery has been successed. A great national guarantee has been given—one-that cannot be revoked. I was getting at the relation that subsisted between the white man and the colored man; a very small proportion of white men, compared with the whole purpose of such compared with the whole purpose of such content the with the whole number of such, owned the colored people of the South.

I might instance the State of Tennessee in illustration. There were twenty-so you non-slaveholders to one slaveholder, and yet the slave power controlled that State. Let us talk about this matter as it is. Although the colored man was in slavery there, and owned as property, in the sense and in the language of that locality and of that community, yet is comparing his condition and his position there with the non-slaveholder, he usually estimated his importance just in proportion to the number of slaves that his master owned with the non-slaveholder. Have you ever lived up-on a plantation?

Mr. Douglas-I have, your Excellency. The President-When you would look over and see a man who had a large family, struggling hard upon a poor piece of land, you thought a great deal less of him than you did of your own master.

Mr. Douglass-Not I.
The President-Well, I know such was he case with a large majority of you in those sections. Where such is the case we know there is an enmity, we know there is a hate. The poor white man, on the other hand, was opposed to the slave and his master, for the colored man and his master combined kept him in slavery by depriving him of a fair participation in the labor and productions of the rich land of the country. Don't you know that a colored man is going to hunt a master, as they call it? For the next year they will prefer living with a man who owned slaves rather than with one who did not. I know the fact, at all

Mr. Douglass-Because they treated him better.

The President-They did not consider it quite as respectable to hire to a man who

Mr. Douglass-Because he would not be treated as well.

The President—Then that is another argument in favor of what I am going to say. It shows that the colored man appreciated the slaveholder more highly than he did the man who did not own slaves, hence the dennity between the colored man and the non-slaveholders. The white man was permitted to vote before the Government was derived from him. He is a part and parcel of the political machinery now, by rebellion or revolution, and when you come back to the objects of this war, you find that the abolition of slavery was not one of the objects. Congress and the President himself order to suppress the rebellion. The abolition of slavery has come as an incident to the suppression of a great rebellion. As an incident, and as an accident, we should give it the proper direction. The colored man went into this war a slave; by the op-eration of the rebellion became out a freedman -equal to a freedman in any other portion of the country. There, then, is a great deal done for him on this point. The non-slaveholder, who was forced into the rebe-lion, and was as loyal as those who lived beyond the limits of the State, was carried into it, and his property, and in a number of instances, the lives of such were and ifficed, and he who has survived has come out of it with nothing gained but agreat deal lost.

Now, upon a principle of justice, should they be placed in a condition different from what they were before? On the one hand, one has gained a great deal; on the other hand, one has lost a great deal, and in a political point of view, soarcely stands where he did before. Now we are talking about what we are going to argue. We have got at the hate that existed between the two races. The query comes up, whether these two races, situated as they were before, without time for passion and excitement to be appeased, and without time for the slightest improvement, whether the one should be turned loose upon the other. and be thrown together at the ballot-boxwith this enmity and hate existing between them? had every inducement held out to take The query comes up, will we not then commence a war of races? I think I underfrom? We say it is derived from the peo-ple. Let us take it so, and refer to the Dis-trict of Columbia by way of illustration.— Suppose, for instance, then, in this political community, which, to a certain extent, must have government, must have lawputting it now upon the broadest basis you can put it—take into consideration the relation in which the white race has heretofore borne to the colored race, is it proper to enforce upon this community, without their consent, the elective franchise without regard to color, making it universal?
Now, where do you begin? Government must have a centrolling power-must have a lodgment. For instance, suppose Congress should pass a law authorizing an elec-tion to be held, at which all over twentyone years of age, without regard to color, should be allowed to vote, and a majority should decide at such election that the slee tive franchise should not be universal, what would you do about it? Who would settle it? Do you deny that first great principle of the right of the people to govern themseves? Will you resort to an arbitrary power, and say a majority of this people shall receive a state of things they are opposed to?

Mr. Douglass—That was said before the The President -- I am now talking about a principle, not what somebody else said.

Mr. Downing—Apply what you have said, Mr. President, to South Carolina, for instance. The President-Suppose you go to South Carolina—suppose you go to Ohio—that does not change the principle at all. The query to which I have referred still comes up when the government is undergoing a fundamental change. The government commenced upon this principle; it has existed upon it and you propose now to inisted upon it, and you propose now to in-corporate into it an element that did not exist before. I say the query comes up, in undertaking this thing, whether we have a right to make a change in regard to the elective franchise in Onio, for instance whether we shall not let the people in that State decide the matter for themselves? Each community is better prepared to determine the depository of its political power than anybody else, and it is for the Legislature, for the people of Ohio, to my who shall vote or not far the Congress of the United States. I might go down here

The Democratic State Central Committee Democracy of the Commonwealth-such an Address as it delights us to give place toshort and sharp-driving directly at the Will he do either? point, and cutting to the marrow to reach their present unblushing efforts for negro suffrage and negro equality and their ultimate aim for a consolidated government.

In view of this, the Address urges organ-ization, promptly and efficiently. Well and Committee.

ADDRESS OF THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE. DEMOCRATIC STATE CONNITTEE ROOMS, 1

HARRISHURG, Feb 9, 1866. To the Democracy of Pennefitvania: 🕠 The events of the last political canvass are yet fresh in your minds. You announced your unequivocal endorsement of the restoration policy of President Johnson, and denounced the doctrine of negro suffrage.

Your opponents affirmed their support of the President, and evaded the issue upon the question of suffrage. A powerful organization, large official patronage and an unscrupulous use of mony, secured to them the victory. The record of the past month strips the mask from the face of the victors. They treat with derision the declared policy of the President. They have placed the Government of the Constitution in abeyance, and its legislative and executive functions are usurped by a cabal of men, who, in obedience to caucus, govern the following trenchant little article under the nation through the forms of a directory. The right of each State to regulate the will of the people of the District of Columthe negro equal political rights with the white man.

The initial step toward a war of races bas been taken, and a consolidated government | vil Rights Bill, looms up in the distance.

The tenets of the President upon these points are our cardinal doctrines. In sustaining him we vindicate them. Organize in every nook and corner of the Commonwealth. Organize to sustain the President, to maintain your principles, to restore the Union, to vindicate the supremacy of your race, and to bring into political oblivion the men who have been false to the Union. false to their pledges, false to the instincts of their blood, and true alone to the madness that rules the hour.

By order of the Democratic State Central WILLIAM A. WALLACE. Committee. Chairman.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY IN READING. Reading, the county seat of Old Berks, has long been under the control of the Republicans; but on Friday week the Democracy rallied at the municipal election and made a clean sweep of the city. The whole Democratic city ticket was elected by a majority of over two hundred. This shows plainly that the popular tide has turned against the fenatics who are now in power. The people see and feel that they are not fit to be, entrusted any longer with the affairs of the government. Reading has long been a black spot on the fair esentcheon of the Gibraltar of Democracy .-Old Berks is now white all over. Laneaster fired the first gun for the success of the "white man's ticket:" her sister city of Reading answers with a cheering salute,
